A relatively tiring walk on roads, but with some interesting religious buildings, including a collection of skulls in an ossuary and a Loreto chapel in Stans, the capital of Canton Nidwalden.

This was most walking on roads, which we found to be very tiring and was exhausted. (This could be due to a lack of sleep, food or water). Walking on roads is tiring and often means walking next to traffic. Due to the mountains and lakes, our journey time was getting longer at this point. It was partly cloudy but the sun did come out. This was also a little difficult as the temperature was constantly changing. Stans was a big surprise as it had an interesting 'old' town. We picnicked at a place that had a bench and a toilet for our use. We saw very few people on our way it being built up areas. We drove to the apartment for supper, after which we felt a lot better. Then we to Fischingen for Compline and meditation. It was a beautiful meditation session in the main church in front of the High Altar and around a massive font filled with water.
