Leaving Decazeville in the rain, through rain and mud to arrive soaked at a quaint chambre d'hôtes that was once a 19th century stone farmhouse. We left Decazeville in the rain, and it only got heavier as the day went on! We had a brief respite as we went through some woods, but then the rain returned heavier than before. We found a friendly grocery shop / newsagent / coffee corner to have a coffee out of the rain in Livinac-le-Haut, where we also met up with two girls and a dog we last saw on leaving Moissac. Heading onwards, we found a wayside chapel in Montredon. We took a shortcut on roads to the place in Felzins, which had individual rooms and was more expensive, but we had a pleasant, but basic, meal with the other pilgrims and the owners (and their dogs)
