Update: December 06, 2022

A relaxing day visiting churches, and then ending up with a tiring climb to a medieval hill-top town. After a communal breakfast in the old cellars with the other 8 or 10 pilgrims, we set off in the early morning mists with a couple of companions. As the mists cleared, we came across various stone buildings of interest, before arriving at Montcuq itself for a coffee with some of our fellow pilgrims from the night before and a visit to the 14th C. church of St Hilaire. We continued to enjoy a relatively relaxed day, pausing to visit churches, on the mistaken understanding that Lauzerte wasn't far and at the bottom of a pleasant valley. This was one of Angus' major map reading errors! Not only was it further than expected, it was at the TOP of a steep hill - the contour lines were up, not down! The day turned into a long slog towards a distant hill, culminating in a steep climb surrounded by roaring traffic, before we reached the hostel.
